MONTREAL MARRIAGES

GELLIS-MANUS

The marriage of Miss Harriet Eleanor Manus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Manus, 3205 Lan-ton Avenue, to Gordon David Gellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gellis, 4873 Kent Avenue, took place at the Sheraton-Mount Royal Hotel, on December 17, at five o'clock. Rabbi Charles Bender officiated, assisted by Cantor E. Goldberger. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white peau de soie was appliqued with Bourdon lace and seed-pearl-boards, and designed with a fitted bodice; heart-shaped neckline; long sleeves, coming to points at the wrists; and straight skirt ending in a chapel train. Her three-quarter-length veil of tulle illusion was draped to a bandeau of seed-pearl-boards; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids and a stephanotis. Miss Shanna Harrison was maid of honour, wearing a turquoise blue, peau de soie gown, made with a dome skirt. She had a rhinestone tiara; and her flowers were a cascade of white and gold-coloured roses. Arlene Manus, niece of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, wore a white, organza gown, made with a full skirt. She had a matching, bow headdress; and carried a nosegay of white and gold-coloured Sweetheart roses. Philip Gellis was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Steven Gellis, brother of the groom; Arnold Manus, brother of the bride; Harry Miller, brother-in-law of the bride; Norman Levy, Leonard Zelnick, Allan Rosenberg, Daniel Natik, Steven Aeff, Murray Cutler, Joel Chasman, Murray Black, and Ronald Faigen. Robert Manus and Earl Miller, nephews of the bride, were junior ushers. White and gold-coloured chrysanthemums, roses, and gladioli decorated the Synagogue. An orchestra played. A reception for two hundred and fifty guests followed the ceremony. Mrs. Manus, mother of the bride, wore an antique-gold-coloured peau de soie gown, trimmed with seed-pearl-boards and sequins at the neckline; with floating panels at the back of the skirt; also a matching, pill-box hat; and had a corsage of gold-coloured orchids. Mrs. Gellis, mother of the groom, was in a light, gold-coloured, peau de soie sheath; made with an applique, beaded bodice; and draped skirt; with a matching tulle hat; and with a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon David Gellis spent their wedding trip in Acapulco, Mexico, the bride going away in a white, three-piece suit, and a black and white cloth coat, with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 4875 Dufferin Road. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schneider, and Arlene and Robert, of Troy, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ryant, of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Posluns, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Posluns, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Posluns, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lurie, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Warsh; all of Toronto.

students had an "intense and vocal interest" in all its aspects. Rabbi Oscar Groer, Hillel's assistant national director, said that for many young students the trial was a "first personal awareness of the real horrors of the Holocaust and of the Nazi era in history as symbolized by Eichmann." As the trial unfolded, he said, a large majority of both Jewish and non-Jewish students were profoundly shocked by the testimony of Nazi mass murder, revealing their unfamiliarity with the Hitler period. One effect was a "marked increase" in the number of non-Jewish students and faculty members seeking information on Judaism and on the causes of anti-Semitism.

The 75 Hillel directors reported that campus opinion was strongly in favor of Israel's judicial handling of the trial and the "calm objectivity" of the proceedings. This was a sharp shift from prior sentiment when many students questioned the legal basis for the trial being held in Israel. In the early weeks after Eichmann's capture, a considerable number of Jewish students were found to be "uneasy" about the possibility of a negative reaction in the non-Jewish community, the Rabbi said. The view of many Jewish students was articulated by an undergraduate who put it this way at a campus forum: "I believe much of the questioning behind the legal and technical defensiveness is this: Why did it all happen? Who let it all happen? At these questions every Jew and Christian turns his head and all are afraid to answer."

TORONTO ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Connort, 73 Charleswood Drive, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rhona Phyllis Connort, to Able Bodied Radar Plotter David Frederick Leviston, R.C.N., of BMC'S Bonaventure, in Halifax, N.S.; son of Mrs. Mign Leviston, 812 Mount Pleasant Road, Toronto, and the late Samuel Leviston.

Hillel Reports Eichmann Trial Major Topic On Any College Campus

The Eichmann trial drew the highest audience response of any college campus topic of the past year, the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations reported. Reports from Hillel directors on 75 major American campuses show that, with few exceptions, attendance was "unusually heavy" at college forums, film programs, lectures, and discussions of the trial, and

Counts five, six and seven of the indictment charge the accused with crimes against humanity committed against Jews. According to Section 1(A) (2) of the law: "Crime against humanity" means one of the following acts: "Murder, extermination, enslavement, starvation, and deportation of civilian population, and also persecution on national, racial, religious or political grounds."

"It is clear that both parts of the definition of the crime against humanity apply to all the activities of the accused against the Jews at the final stage, as from August, 1941, and that at this stage, he participated in all the inhuman acts which are mentioned in the section of the law (murder, extermination, enslavement, starvation and deportation of civilian population).

The seventh counts refers to the plunder of the property of the victims, and in this connection charges the accused with a crime against humanity. In this regard, counsel for the defense put forward a legal argument, that according to the definition in law, plunder of property is not included in the list of acts constituting crimes against humanity. The Attorney General argued that plunder of property is within the definition of "any other inhuman act committed against any civilian population," as stated in Section 1(b) of the law.

We hold that according to the language of the law in question the plunder of property may be considered an inhuman act within the meaning of the definition only if it is committed under the pressure of mass terror against any civilian population, or if it is linked to any of the other acts of violence defined by the law as a crime against humanity, or as a result of any of these acts, i.e., murder, extermination, starvation, or deportation of any civilian population, so that the plunder is only part of a general process, by way of "Hust thou killed (or expelled) and also taken possession."

In the eighth count, the accused is charged with a war crime in that during World War II in Germany and other Axis states, and in areas occupied by them, together with others, he caused the ill-treatment, deportation and murder of the Jewish population of the countries occupied by Germany and by other Axis states.

Unless there is a justification for these acts of his, the accused will be convicted also on the charge of war crimes according to the eighth count.

Count nine of the indictment charges the accused with a crime against humanity committed against over 500,000 Polish civilians. The period is between 1940 and 1942, and the act—deportation of Poles from their places of residence with intent to settle German families in those places.

Counsel for the defense argued that the Poles were not deported, but that they were "resettled" in a way which does not constitute a crime. Let us therefore examine the nature of the activities mentioned in this count of the indictment. Almost all the proof is documentary, except the evidence of the accused and that of the witness Krumey (taken in Germany), a number of excerpts from the statement by Hoess, and the evidence of Rajewsky in the case of Hoess in Poland.

The result is that the accused's guilt of a crime against humanity has been proved, in that, between the years 1940 and 1942 he caused, together with others, the expulsion of a civilian population, namely hundreds of thousands of Poles, under the circumstances already described by us.

The tenth count charges the accused with a crime against humanity which has been proved, in that in the year 1941 he took part in the expulsion of over 14,000 Slovaks, in order to settle German families in their stead. In this matter, too, the accused does not deny his own activity and the activity of his department in matters of transport, but according to the argument by the defense, it has not been proved that the deportation was carried out in an inhuman manner or by means of terror.

Every act of forced deportation of a civilian population is in itself a crime against humanity. The fact that at the end of 1942, thousands of Slovaks still had not found permanent dwelling places for themselves proves that this act of evacuation brought much human suffering in its wake. The accused's complicity with others in a crime against humanity was thus also proved on this count.

Count eleven charges the accused with a crime against humanity by participating in the deportation of tens of thousands of gypsies, their concentration and their transportation to extermination camps where they were to be murdered.

In the material put before us, first mention of the gypsies appears in a meeting held on 21-23-29, at which Heydrich ordered the deportation of 30,000 gypsies to Poland.

We gather that the transportation of the gypsies was carried out by the accused's department, and for that, he bears responsibility. But we do not have sufficient proof before us that the accused dealt also with the concentration of gypsies.

Gypsies were exterminated at Auschwitz and at Chelmo. But we have no reliable proof before us that the accused knew that the gypsies transported by his department to Auschwitz were to be exterminated there.

The result is that the accused's complicity in the commission of a crime against humanity has been proved, by his participation in the deportation of the gypsies.

Count twelve of the indictment charges the accused with a crime against humanity, regarding nearly 100 children of the village of Lidice in Czechoslovakia. According to the indictment, the accused participated in their deportation, their transport to Poland and their murder.

The accused denied all activity in, or knowledge of this, and counsel for the defense also contends that the murder of the children was not proved.

We are concerned with ninety-three children handed to the Lidice Gestapo authority, and with sixteen children transferred for Germanization. It has not been proved that the accused fulfilled any function in connection with the sixteen children who were transferred for Germanization.

There is no doubt that these ninety-three children were deported and that, in that, the accused took part in their deportation. Krumey, who, at the time, was head of the center for the change of residence, referred a question to the accused, asking what to do with these children. He also spoke to the accused in person.

It has been proved only that he participated in the expulsion of the ninety-three children of Lidice from their homeland, and he thus took part in the commission of a crime against humanity.

In the three last counts of the indictment, counts thirteen to fifteen, the prosecution charges the accused with offenses against Section 3 of the law, viz. membership in S. D. organizations, S. D. and Gestapo, which are, according to the prosecution's submission, hostile organizations within the meaning of this section.

The accused's membership in those organizations is not indisputable.

He is to be connected also on counts thirteen to fifteen of the indictment:

The accused's principal defense is that all he did, was in accordance with orders from his superiors. This he regards as full justification for all his deeds.

We heard this argument in its most extreme form from the counsel for the defense as follows:

The basic principle of every state is: Loyalty to and confidence in the leadership. The deed is dumb, and obedience is blind. These are the virtues on which alone a state can build its foundations. Do such virtues merit reward? This depends upon the success of the policy. If it failed, the order would be considered a crime in the eyes of the victor. Then the one who had obeyed would be an unfortunate and he would be called upon to pay for his loyalty. The gallows or a decoration — that is the question. To fail is abominable crime. To succeed, is sanctified action. (Section 114, p. 30).

If by these words, counsel for the defense intended to describe a totalitarian regime based on denial of all law, as was Hitler's regime in Germany, then his words are indeed apt. But such arguments are not to be voiced in any state in the world which bases itself on the rule of law.

The attempt to turn an order for the extermination of millions of innocent people into a political act with the aim of thus exonerating from their personal criminal responsibility, those who gave, and those who carried out the order, is of no avail. And let not counsel for the defense console us with the promise of a world government to come, when such "acts of state" will become a thing of the past.

We do not have to wait for such a radical change in the relations between nations in order to bring a criminal to judgment, according to his own personal responsibility for his acts, which is the basis of criminal judgment all over the world.

An additional argument, in spirit similar to the former, which the counsel for the defense hinted at, rather than argued explicitly, is that the accused could have relied for his defense upon the law of war. Here, too, it would have been better had this argument not been put forward.

In civilized countries, the rejection of the defense of superior

Mrs. Berman, mother of the bride, wore a champagne-coloured, Chantilly lace sheath, with headwork around the neckline, which formed a V at the back; and a hat to match; and had a wristlet of white and yellow roses. Mrs. Cincinnati, mother of the groom, wore a pink peau de sole gown, trimmed with beadwork around the scooped neckline; and bouffant skirt. Her hat matched it; and she had a wristlet of pink and white roses. Mr.

orders as exempting completely from criminal responsibility, has now become general. This was also acknowledged by the General Assembly of the United Nations, being one of the principles of the London Charter and of the judgment in the case against the major war criminals (Resolution of the Plenary Session, No. 55, dated 11-12-46).

Perhaps it is not a vain hope that the more this conviction becomes rooted in the minds of men, the more will they refrain from following criminal leaders, and the rule of law, and order in the relations between nations will be strengthened accordingly.

Of course, the accused well knew that the order for the physical extermination of the Jews was manifestly unlawful, and that by carrying out this order he was committing criminal acts on an enormous scale.

The accused had more than enough time to consider his actions and to desist from them. But he did not stop. As time went on he even increased his activity.

With what we have said up to now, the accused's attempt to rely on superior orders for the justification of his acts or even in mitigation of his punishment according to Section 11 of the law, is already doomed to failure.

Since the order was manifestly unlawful, they cannot be used as an excuse.

How does he describe his reaction to the horrifying sights which he saw from time to time with his own eyes during his visits to the East? The mass slaughter of Jews, men, women and babies, the shooting on the brink of a grave, the blood spurting from a mass grave, the loading of Jews into the gas vans in Chełmno, the cremation of bodies there, the transport of Jews into the gas chambers? This is what he said, quoting his own words to Mueller on his return from such a journey:

"Terrible, I tell you, the inferno, this I cannot bear, I told him:

"Please don't send me to that place. Send someone else, send someone more robust. Look, I have never been allowed to go to the front. I was never a soldier. They do not collapse. I cannot watch it. I said I cannot sleep at night: I have dreams — I cannot carry on this way, gruppenfuhrer."

Somewhere else in his statement to Superintendent Less, he explains his desire to be transferred to another post, giving as additional reasons his chances for promotion and his lack of interest in police work as such from the very beginning, from the time of his transfer to Berlin in the year 1939.

Let us remember that even before the Wannsee conference he had already seen what was happening in the East, and had been deporting Reich Jews to the slaughter. Yet, in spite of this, according to his testimony here, he feels like a Pontius Pilate, that is, like a man who could find a way of soothing his conscience.

And this, in fact, is his basic contention: that the order sets his conscience free, that blind obedience, according to an oath of loyalty, comes first and stands above all, and that against this obedience, the voice of one's conscience cannot even make itself heard.

The attorney general submitted that had the accused seriously tried to be released from his murderous task, he could have found ways of attaining his object. In the evidence before us, there is ground for this submission.

We reach the heart of our discussion of the inner motives which prompted the accused in his activities. That he was merciless in all his deeds is almost undisputed.

Out of this soil of hatred for the Jews grew the actions of the accused, and it is clear that mere blind obedience could not have brought him to commit the crimes with such efficiency and devotion as he evinced, were it not for his zealous belief that he was thereby fulfilling an important national mission.

In all his activities, the accused displayed indefatigable energy, verging on over-eagerness toward advancing the final solution, both in his general decisions and in his treatment of individual cases of Jews who wished to escape death.

To summarize this chapter we shall state that the accused closed his ears to the voice of his conscience, as was demanded of him by the regime to which he was wholeheartedly devoted, and to which he had sold himself body and soul. Thus he sank from one depth to another, until, in the implementation of the "final solution" he reached the nether hell. He believed wholeheartedly in the National Socialist's bogus ideology that the Jews were enemies of the Reich, and that they were to be destroyed without mercy. His hatred was cold and calculated, aimed rather against the Jewish people as a whole than against the individual Jew, and just because of this it was so poisonous and destructive in all its manifestations. To this task he devoted his alert mind, his great cunning and his organizing skill.

He acted within the general framework of the orders which were given to him. But within this framework, he went to every extreme to bring about the speedy and complete extermination of all Jews in the territories under German rule and influence.

a damaging role in our country. Men on whom the sombre shadow of the synagogue falls are diverted from public activity and turn aside from all the great deeds achieved by the Soviet people."

In evaluating these articles in the Soviet press, Mr. Freeman asserted:

"Despite the history of hostility toward the corporate personality and the religious tradition of the Jews of the Soviet Union, we do not despair of their future and we will not abandon them in their time of ordeal. There is reason to believe that the courage of Soviet Russia's Jewish community has not been entirely undermined and that their will to survive has not been broken."

"It took a deep sense of national pride for a delegation of Jews from Daghistan to organize themselves last year into a protest group to visit Moscow and demand redress for the outrageous anti-Semitic blood libel published in the Buiaksk Kommunist of August 9, 1960."

"It took a deep sense of religious pride for thousands of Jewish youths to brave official reprisals by dancing in the streets outside the Leningrad Synagogue in celebration of the Jewish festival of Simchas Torah (Rejoicing of the Torah)."

"Jewish pride lives on, even in the U.S.S.R. We cannot and will not abandon our efforts to strengthen Soviet Jewry's spirit of solidarity with the Jewish people and with their Jewish heritage."

Study Of Soviet Press Shows Return To Long-Standing, Anti-Jewish Attack

The recent secret arrest and imprisonment of Jewish leaders in Moscow and Leningrad this fall may signal a return to the long-standing campaign of anti-Jewish vituperation in the U.S.S.R., a campaign which had apparently been moderating in recent months, it was reported by the American Jewish Congress in a study of the treatment of Jews and Judaism in the government-controlled Soviet press.

In releasing a compilation of quotations from Soviet publications dealing with Jewish religious practices, Zionism, and Israel, Julian Freeman, of Indianapolis, Ind., chairman of the American Jewish Congress Commission on International Affairs, said that during recent months there had been some reason to hope that Soviet Russia's official hostility toward Jews was abating.

"For the first time in many years, there appeared a recognition in official Soviet publications of the contributions of Jews to Soviet life and of the existence of a separate and distinct Jewish culture in the U.S.S.R.," Mr. Freeman noted. He cited the launching of a Yiddish language bi-monthly magazine, Sovietish Heimland; the distribution of limited editions of works by Sholom Aleichem and other Yiddish masters; and the publication of "Babi Yar," a poem by the non-Jewish Russian poet, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, denouncing Russian anti-Semitism, in the official organ of the Soviet Writers' Union, Literaturny Gazeta.

The American Jewish Congress leader stated: "The significance of what we had hoped was the dawn of a new day for Soviet Jewry must presumably be discounted, however, by the arrest, trial and imprisonment of Jewish religious leaders in the two largest centers of Jewish population in the U.S.S.R. These events give reason to fear that hostility toward Jewish practices and teachings remains the major theme of Soviet policy towards the country's Jewish citizens, and that recent signs of a modification of this policy may have been only side excursions. Those changes were of course welcome and encouraging as far as they went. What we must contend with, however, as our study of Soviet publications discloses, is the government's long-standing and deep-seated antagonism toward all phases of Jewish life."

The American Jewish Congress report noted that some of the most violent attacks in the Soviet press have been directed against traditional Jewish practices such as circumcision and Bar Mitzvah (confirmation). On January 11, 1961, the Russian-language magazine Kommunist, official party organ of the Saratov district, denounced one Boris Lvovich Katz, a member of the Communist youth movement, Komsomol, who sought to have his infant son circumcised. Describing the practice as "a sacrifice to the God Yahve" which was insisted on by "fanatics of the Talmud," the newspaper also listed the names, addresses, jobs, and places of employment of the friends and family members who participated in the circumcision ceremony.

Commenting on what he termed "this characteristic method of Soviet coercion," Mr. Freeman declared: "The article is significant in that it shows how tenaciously many Soviet Jews, even members of Communist organizations, still cling to Jewish traditional practices. At the same time, however, there is the clear threat that those who participate in such observances stand in danger of losing their livelihoods, of being subjected to the obloquy of their neighbors and even of being punished under the laws dealing with 'anti-social activities.'"

An earlier attack, appearing in the August 11, 1960, issue of the Moldavian-language periodical, Moldavia Socialist, likened circumcision ceremonies to "tortures" and "cruel rituals" which provided "a source of income for synagogue loafers." Bar Mitzvah ceremonies were described in the same article as "attempts to poison the souls of children with religious venom." Other traditional Jewish practices attacked in the Soviet press included the baking of unleavened bread (matzo), described as "illegal" in Kazakhstanskaya Pravda, on April 12, 1960; and kosher slaughtering, the object of vilification in the Byelorussian journal, Gomelskaya Pravda, of July 24, 1960.

Jewish religious instruction itself was assailed in Sovetskaya Moldavia on April 28, 1960, in an article describing the trial by public tribunal of a group of religious Jews charged with teaching their children to speak Hebrew. The article concluded: "The believers in Yahve cannot conceal themselves under the synagogue canopy. Down has been torn the holy 'Tallis' exposing the motives of money-grabbers, for whom money is holier than all gods." (The "Tallis" is the prayer shawl).

Condemnation of Israel and Zionism has been a constant theme in the Soviet press, according to the American Jewish Congress study. A leader in this criticism, it was noted, has been the widely-read Soviet trade union journal, Trud, regarded as a significant barometer of government policy on Jewish affairs. As one example, the study cited a Trud article of January 6, 1961, which charged that "the international Zionist organization supplied military equipment to Hitler's armies during 1944-45 on the condition that it would be used only against the Soviet forces."

Commenting on this charge, the AJCongress spokesman, Julian Freeman, declared:

"This accusation was a deliberate distortion of the notorious proposal of Adolf Eichmann, transmitted by the Nazi leader to the Jewish Agency, to trade one million Jews for 60,000 trucks. As the world knows, this fantastic and monstrous offer was never accepted. Soviet press attacks on Israel and Zionism have been particularly distressing because they are almost always accompanied by direct or implicit attacks on the loyalty of Russian Jewry. Zionism, traditionally regarded by the Soviet regime as 'reactionary' and 'counter-revolutionary,' thus becomes synonymous with subversion."

As one example, Mr. Freeman noted an article in Trud dated July 17, 1960, entitled, "Zionists Are Looking for New Victims." The influential magazine charged that Zionists, in their "hunt for new victims, distributed propaganda which does not hesitate to publish coarse, anti-Soviet fabrications side by side with fables about Israeli blessings. Zionists look for simpletons to serve as cannon fodder."

Another example of this Soviet propaganda technique, the report said, was an article in the August, 1960, issue of the Russian magazine, Ogonek, which cited a letter purportedly sent by a former Soviet citizen who had been "lured" to Israel, and who wrote back to his brothers: "They want to turn us into provocateurs, traitors. They offer us money and things to despatch to relatives in Russia..."

The denunciation of Israel was intensified in the Russian language journal, Sovetskaya Latvia, which on February 3, 1961, criticized Israel as a state ruled by "jungle laws" and organized in terms of a "racial ladder." Further attacks came in the Russian-language newspaper Sovetskaya Moldavia, dated April 8, 1961, which published a letter on "the seamy side of much-praised Israel," describing Israel as a place in which there is no work, no roof, no piece of bread. Israel was attacked on the Moscow radio home service broadcast of July 18, 1960, as a country that "serves the interests of Western imperialism in the Middle East."

One phase of the campaign of anti-Jewish incitement and intimidation reported in the American Jewish Congress Soviet press survey began with the publication on August 26, 1960, of an attack on the synagogue as an institution. The Ukrainian-language newspaper, Radianska Bukovina, published in Chernovtsy, the Ukraine, printed an article describing the local synagogue at 25 Ruski Street as the "premises for... shady profiteering agreements which had nothing to do with the performance of religious rituals. Why should this be surprising, when the synagogue is also exploited for dubious aims by those who distribute Jerusalem skullcaps with their hands while they poison the soul with the stench of their Pharisee utterances?"

The response was prompt and dutiful, the AJCongress study noted. Six letters from readers of Radianska Bukovina were published two weeks later in the September 9, 1960, issue of the journal. One letter, signed by "scientists of the Chernovtsy Medical Institute," many with Jewish-sounding names, accused the synagogue of being a center for "machinations and speculations" and attacked synagogue leaders for having hospitably welcomed an Israeli diplomat who appeared before them "with foul motives." The letter concluded: "As the synagogue has also become a platform for anti-Soviet activities, we demand that the authorities stop its harmful existence and close it." Four other letters published in the same issue of Radianska Bukovina also called for closing the synagogue.

A demand for shutting down another synagogue was made in the Russian-language Sovetskaya Moldavia of August 5, 1960, in which seven synagogue leaders wrote that "the time has come to tell all Jewish believers that the synagogue brings nothing to people but harm. We do not want to cheat workers and ourselves any longer and have consequently come to the conclusion that the existence of the synagogue serves no purpose," their letter said.

A notable example of a propaganda attack seeking to discredit Jewish religious doctrines as counter-revolutionary and subversive, according to the report, was contained in an article, "The Ominous Shadow of the Synagogue," published in the June 10, 1960, issue of the Byelorussian newspaper, Zviazda. This article attacked several targets simultaneously, including "class oppression" by rabbis; "deception" practiced to encourage unsuspecting Jews to emigrate to Israel; "counter-revolutionary" activities of Jewish religious functionaries; "corrupt" practices of synagogue officials and activities of foreign Jewish tourists who come to the Soviet Union for "filthy purposes."

The Zviazda article charged that "Jewish rabbis have always protected the interests of the exploiting classes, being hostile to the workers' liberation movement," that "Jewish clerics met the great socialist October Revolution with hostility. Life compelled them to change their attitude gradually and to become loyal to the regime, lest they jeopardize completely their influence over the Jewish workers. This does not mean, of course, that Jewry ceased to play

Jewish Labor Committee Scores Pressures From Arabs Against U. S. Jews As Tourists

The National Education Association was challenged by the Jewish Labor Committee to declare itself in opposition to pressures from certain Arab states which refuse to permit American tourists of the Jewish faith to enter those countries. This demand came from Jacob Pat, executive secretary of the Jewish Labor Committee, in a letter to Dr. William G. Carr, executive secretary of the NEA, in Washington, D.C.:

It has come to our attention that the National Education Association has continued to sponsor tours to Arab countries which practice discrimination against American citizens of the Jewish faith. We are aware that when this issue was raised with the National Education Association, it agreed that its Board of Directors would review the proposed tours each year as well as the list of countries to be included in the NEA travel program. In the past, the approved list of countries included Lebanon and Syria, which despite the assurances their representatives may have given the NEA, still maintain a discriminatory policy against Americans of the Jewish faith.

Certainly the NEA does not impose restrictions on its own members or approve these exclusionary policies, but if it is forced to yield to these restrictions and discriminatory practices, it endangers the democratic principles it espouses. The National Education Association had the opportunity to state that it would not sponsor tours to countries which discriminate against American citizens because of race, color or religion, but chose to adopt the position referred to above, reviewing foreign tours annually.

In light of this situation, we would greatly appreciate clarification of the following: Does the NEA plan to sponsor tours to Arab countries in 1962, specifically to Syria and Lebanon? Do these countries inquire into the racial or religious background of the tour participants? Are Jewish tour participants singled out by these countries to declare that they are not 'Zionists'? What would be the NEA policy if a Jewish teacher participating in an NEA-sponsored tour is not admitted by an Arab state? (We understand that on occasion, an individual was re-routed).

We are confident that the NEA, as an organization of educators, is aware of the dangers inherent in condoning discrimination, as well as the value of a forthright declaration condemning attempts by foreign countries to create distinctions among NEA members based on religion or race.
